Choose one of the two topics and write 170-180 words (17-20 lines) about it in English. Include and elaborate each of the four points given. Create a coherent letter, make sure you connect one idea to the next. Use appropriate language. Remember to use the relevant English letter format (address, date, greeting, signature). In this part of the exam you can use your dictionary.

A) Your best friend's parents are getting divorced. Break the news to your English friend, who has gone through the same situation.

In your letter let him/her know

- what the parents have said about the reasons,
- what your friend is going through,
- the changes that your friend can expect in the future. Ask him/her
- what he/she did when his/her parents got divorced.
- B) Your company has decided to organise a party for its 20th anniversary. As you are the organiser, you have to write a letter to invite the employees to join you in the celebration.

Write about

- the time and the location of the event,
- what sports and other entertainment programmes you will have,

Mention

- the programmes you are organising, and the artists that are invited,
- that there will be a raffle and valuable prizes can be won.

Chewing Gum to Lose Weight

Are you trying to lose weight? Or do you want to concentrate better in school and improve your memory? Then start popping gum into your mouth and chew on it. Is it good to chew gum? ...(1)... The benefits from such a small piece of elastic candy are quite a lot. Schools used to prohibit students from chomping on gum. But today, recent studies recommend it.

...(2)... They conducted a new study showing evidence that it could contribute to better academic performance. For students who chewed on gum while at school had a 3% increase in getting better test scores and final grades than those non-chompers. ...(3)...

A recent study also showed more solid evidence on the big benefits of popping on the gum. It is good to chew gum for our dental health and for those suffering from acid reflux disease.

...(4)... The saliva produce during the act of chewing washes away the acids and bacteria, thus, protecting the teeth. It also decreases symptoms of acid reflux disease. The saliva can act as an antacid on the stomach.

Furthermore, chewing gum can increase blood flow to the brain by 25%, hence, improving memory and concentration. And through the working of the jaw during chewing, it can burn 11 calories per hour. The benefits are actually greater than its downside. Those who grind their teeth at night should not chew gum. ...(5)...

A) It helped them to pay better attention in class and required fewer breaks.

B) These findings should be reassuring to women who often worry that they are so stressed out with going to work.

C) It may be hard to believe but it actually is.

D) People who have chronic tension headaches should avoid it.

E) A recent study has shown more reasons to pop on the gum.

F) Those who chew gum 20 minutes after meals can help to prevent tooth decay.

Local Guide of Historic Kirkstall Abbey

Set amidst beautiful parkland in a stunning riverside location on the banks of the River Aire in Leeds are the preserved ruins of Kirkstall Abbey – still at their original full height. Built between 1152–1160 by Cistercian monks, Kirkstall Abbey is a wonderful example of a medieval Abbey, with many of its walls still intact. At Kirkstall Abbey, you will discover woodland trails, recreation spaces, tennis courts, and a children's playground. There is also a visitor's centre with audio and visual presentations, along with a guide to all ongoing activities.

It is easy to find along Kirkstall Rd, located just a couple of miles from the city centre and well served by both bus routes and the nearby Headingly train station, which is less than half a mile away. Admission to Kirkstall Abbey is free.

The Abbey was closed in 1534 on the command of Henry VIII, who had ordered the dissolution of all religious buildings and the gatehouse was blocked at either end as a result, forcing the monks to flee. In 1926 Abbey House was bought by Leeds City Council and opened as a bygones and folklore museum; it is a Grade I listed building and underwent a £5.5 million restoration aided by a significant grant from the Heritage Lottery Fund.

The visitors' centre provides an informative visit, catering for all the family, with interactive displays and presentations exploring the history of the Abbey, along with information on the special events that are hosted there, ranging from ghost walks to various festivals and not to mention an annual open-air concert. You are also able to experience the life of a medieval monk and take a step back in time and imagine how different life was for the monks compared to today, whilst also admiring the wonderful ancient stone work.

Across the road from the Abbey itself is the Abbey House Museum. The ground floor of the museum is set out as an area of Victorian streets, including a range of houses, shops and services, where you can even take some time out in the Hark to Rover Inn, a recreated model of a Victorian drinking house.

Special event days see people in traditional Victorian costume wander the recreated Victorian Streets, including the residential district of Abbey Fold that examines life and death in Victorian times. There are 19th century toys, games and dolls in the shop on Harewood, which are only on display though.

There are also three galleries in the museum, along with information being displayed about the construction and history of the Abbey. There are various activities dotted around the museum, such as arts and craft tables where children can make masks, play with modelling clay and much more. There is also a cafe, a gift shop and a small play park, in addition to a local pub and Morrison's supermarket situated nearby for those looking for something to eat. On a sunny day, it is ideal to take a stroll through the parkland around the ruins. There are some lovely areas to walk, with plenty of space for a picnic or a walk down by the canal, whilst the summer months in particular always attract plenty of people setting up barbecues for the day, all adding to the atmosphere of one of the most interesting places to visit.
