Note: This PDF has had certain rights based options enabled. This allows the user to add comments and to use the Measurement tools within Acrobat Reader. The artist prefers the Perimeter tool, which allows measurement of non-linear paths. It has been scaled so that "one point" (1 pt) equals one mile to make calculation of days traveled simple and easy. It has also been broken into Layers, which allows screenshots of regions without the location icons or text labels, at your discretion. To set your default Units to Points go to Edit>Preferences>Units. Consult the Acrobat Reader help files for the use of these options.

This Atlas was compiled from the original FASA Earthdawn material, from as many of the original maps as possible with additions from the current Redbrick line. This was vectorized painstakingly by hand by Joshua Fontany (Telarus, KSC). Comments may be emailed to telarus@gmail.com. Original Artwork is Kopyleft (all rights reserved, reprint what you like). Please respect my work, and the work of FASA and Redbrick by giving credit where credit is due. Many thanks to the Redbrick crew for ensuring the survival of Earthdawn, and producing premium products. All Hail Discordia.
